Acknowledgments

I am most grateful to the manufacturers and workers who are profiled in this book. They were gracious in allowing me to tell their stories, and they took the time to fact check drafts. They represent the best of our country.

I, of course, want to thank Mom and Dad and Vikas and Lauren, who always believed I had it in me to write a book. My closest friends pushed me to put pen to paper. They include Renato Mariotti, Chris Nichols, Sharon Cornu, John Mogg, Shefali Razdan Duggal, Mahesh Pakala, Reena Rao, John Overton, Yogi Chugh, and a few others who know who they are but do not want to be publicly mentioned. I am also blessed to have an incredibly supportive extended family.

No individuals have been more critical to my public service career than Amy Rao, Brian Wolff, Talat and Kamil Hasan, Marco Simons, and Vinod Khosla. I would not have had the opportunities I did were it not for their confidence in me.

Steve Glickman challenged my ideas throughout my time in Washington and is one of the best policy minds I know. Perna Tomar, Etelle Higonnet, and Cindy and Alex Hilke read early
